349 set on the rafters a similar chest with bones of 766 the old ancestor of the Odja suku. I was told
769 that this has been there for hundreds of years,
614 but then it was reckoned that it had been there
621 for at least seven generations. It too was covered with ikat clothing. There was no drum in this one. They said that when the ancestor suku feast is held, hundreds of people gather here and buffaloes are killed, as was true in the other place. All around are many other stone cist tombs, all graves of descendants of the big 342 Odja. There are some high houses here, but most of them are lower in construction.

286 In Padjambu we saw many women spinning and weaving. One girl was pressing cotton fluff on a primitive wooden wringer arrangement in order to flatten it before spinning. It looked just like an old-fashioned clothes wringer. We saw an old woman preparing the loom threads in the first stage of ikat work. The white threads were wrapped with fiber windings. We saw several ikat sarongs, all of which were heavy and dull in [435] color. The kapitan said that I could buy one for [181] fl. 150.00 and another for fl. 250.00. This again shows the grasping character of these folk.

123 I forgot to say that the kapitan wants to go to Larantuka with us. I refused to let him go along. Also, at the Odja ancestral bone bundle tower an old mother said we had to leave an offering. We left some cigarettes. Perhaps they wanted money.

286 These ikat things are all over. I don't like
386 them very much, but they are genuine. The cotton
531 is grown locally and is pressed and spun. The dyes are blue and black and are made from indigo leaves. The ikat work is done with ties of fiber.
● [438] Indeed, the only trade material used here is the red dye they buy in the stores. They also weave regular cloth, but the colors are always dull. The designs are small and indecisive.

632 told me that his mother is from this area, and later I had her kampong pointed out (Lewoleda). It is the twin kampong of Watuwiti. As we passed every kampong the children came out in droves shouting greetings and then running after and hanging on the rear of the jeep, just as Vatter[1] described them almost twenty years ago. [178] Indeed, many things of his are still the same, but some are different, for example, Catholicism has finally destroyed the nubanara, nama, and the korke of Leloba.

346 797 583 438 At Wailolong we went off on a new side road to Leloba, and the road ended at the kampong, barred by a fence. As we were talking here, a priest, Krol, came up on his motorcycle and invited us to his hut. He is temporarily here because the church and pastorie in Riangkamië was burned two months ago. The people there caused the fire by burning the hills on the windward side, and the kampong elders voted to give a percentage of the bride prices for quite a long while in order that they might have the new church. This will be paid in elephant tusks, [435] which the mission will sell for cash to the Mohammedan traders (eight tusks of varying lengths will sell for about fl. 2000.00, and the priest knew the exact price). The Mohammedan traders will then resell the tusks to the people in Larantuka who need them to pay a bride price. They will probably sell them in the Tandjung Bunga (Cape Flores area).

797 197 177 The priest told how the Catholics work here. They try to keep as much of the old culture as possible. For example, he and others are learning all about the Solor language, which is the local language here, so that they can make prayers in it. They also make prayers in the 797 old style, as though praying to Lerawulan. They 177 use native songs with words in the native lan- 553 guage and in the native style, too. He, musical,

764 with upright stone. They are built by indi-
211 viduals to commemorate their own name. There
[554] is great vanity here in keeping one's name alive after death. Thus the ngadu builder gets his name on the ngadu too. There are no offerings, however, at these rest places.

231 The Nageh in Soa kill animals with spears
411 as they are released (probably a hunting survival). Perhaps this is related to Toradja spearing?

Larantuka: We left Ende on Friday, January
556 6, and after ten and a half hours we got to 237 Larantuka. There we met a young Chinese trader
177 who was born in Lomblem and whose father has a
438 toko there. They are now in Surabaja, but he comes through Flores and the islands to buy stuff each year. He is now buying kemiri nuts. He told me a lot about Lomblem. He said that there are thousands of tusks in Lomblem alone. And he said that Maumere, which is relatively rich in various products, is cornering a large part of the tusks of Flores. In other places, for example, in Larantuka, there are fewer tusks now, and people are beginning to pay money instead. The Maumere folk, he said, think nothing of money. The real wealth and goal of all striving is tied up in the tusks. He said that the Chinese brought the tusks in originally and told the radjas here that they were the teeth of the naga (which was important locally before that). The radjas paid dearly for them, and soon all the folk here wanted them. Hence, thousands were imported by the Chinese. It may have been the same situation as that which obtains with the mokko in the Alor area. They too may well be from China.

511 This Chinese said that in Lomblem the folk
461 want very little. They work a little, just
185 enough to get the corn going, and then drink
273 enough gin to go to sleep. When drunk they

511 sing a little and then go to sleep. The only
461 time they work hard, and this consists of 185 bringing in coconuts and other stuff to the [273] Chinese, is when they want to get clothes for feasts and when they have to pay taxes. Their only thorn is taxation. Without taxes they would be completely happy. I heard later, in 237 regard to the tusks, that there are very few ●438 in Wailolong, perhaps only ten. However, they 556 circulate and keep the system going. The assistant said that many have been sold because the people need money so badly. Many were sold to the people in Tandjung Bunga.

We When we went to Wailolong we met the assis-
614 tant on the section of Wailolong which is on 241 the side road near Leloba. He was there getting 796 census material. We went off there and at-
231 tended a rite of the Leworita suku, or rather one of the ama of the suku. It was the rite for the beginning of the agricultural season. The big kampong rite was held first, and here it was held on Christmas. Then, each suku has a similar rite, and then again each ama. They are just now getting around to the ama rites.
[343] In this section there are two kebang (lumbung or barns) adat, i.e. suku or ama barns. The big kepala barn is that of the Number One suku (here Ama Dotang [usually Ama Kottang] which is near the main korke). The two suku represented here are Lewodoreng and Leworita. This rite was held under the adat barn of Leworita (where jaws of sacrificed pigs hang), but the land is owned by Lewodoreng. This is why the men who played the roles of Kottang and Kelen (head and feet) were not from Leworita but from Lewodoreng.

The old pagans (some were not so old) did the rites, but the Christians stood all around, and they ate what they could get later, probably. A small pig was brought in and then the prepa-

582 in other areas, or working in the gardens lo-
476 cated in another kampong. Here again, it is a
602 matter of marriage. Indeed, only if marriage
621 gives a person some sort of privilege to work in the other kampong does one usually engage himself in such work.

632 Relations between districts have not changed
582 much in recent years. If there are marriages
602 between the districts involved, the same situation obtains as between the kampongs just described. Similar situations are those involving different tribes. Bonds are formed if there are marriage links; if there are no such ●[498] links there are no bonds. Trade is so small a factor that it is unimportant in intercommunity relations.

186 The people here love their own kampong and 621 feel that they are lost when they are outside.
166 Figuratively and literally, they have no place in another kampong. They can see good in another kampong, however, and if they go elsewhere and return they tell about the good things there and may even adopt them themselves. Only the young people, and few of them, want to get out and see other places. Once they are married they never leave.

609 They say that if they leave their own kampong for another they become outsiders. They are then nipatale (beyond the fence). The other term used in suku terminology for outsiders is rere. It means "low." The opposite term, which also occurs among the suku, is belolong ("high").

578 All seven kampongs have been enemies of Riang
621 Kamië. The seven have remained about the same
614 in relationship to each other, but tales tell a 173 bit about the ranking among them. Riang Kamië was formed by a union of several kampongs which were separate formerly. These united into one kampong in defense against the Bai Pitu (seven 000 858 children. It is remarkable that there is so much freedom exhibited by the children all over here. They do as they please evidently.

463 212 622 Nearly everyone is a farmer here, but to be kepala kampong, kapitan, secretary, or the like, an individual must be literate. There are, however, illiterate kepala kampongs, but they must use a literate mandur to help them with the work. There are no openings for clerical people or the like.

[874] 787 [754] [756] [844] The only seminary here is for priests, and as yet there are no students there from here. The bisa mari (sorcerers) are not trained. They get their call in dreams. They are about equally male and female. The dukun also get their call in dreams. However, the ones who are midwives learn from mothers.

463 438 335 There are no specialists at all. The local population must buy even its ironwork elsewhere. They do not even have carpenters here. Anyone can build a house. This place exhibits a very low level in all such things except weaving. They now learn music in school.

873 Many children who are clever and would like to advance in school cannot do this as it costs fl. 10.00 per month for a higher education. There is plenty of heartache here. Perhaps there is not so very much yet, actually.

212 Fifty years ago no one could read or write, not even in the Ende script.

197 One hundred per cent of the people here speak Ende, including the foreigners from Savu and the Chinese. The latter did not speak Ende when they came in, but after a year they could.

Only about one hundred can speak Malay. No one speaks Dutch. The children are starting to learn a bit of Dutch in school now, but this is evidently only in the higher school.

There are no other languages spoken, except, of course, Chinese and Savu. They say that they 754 the way to Ndona. She has a second sight, and 756 uses stones to divine. She gets her cures

[787] from dreams. I asked whether she had familiars in dreams, but got no satisfactory reply. But now I can at least proceed with further queries regarding the bisa mari, having an actual case in mind. She can save a woman whose child dies inside her. She is a rather handsome old lady, well preserved, with piercing eyes. She looks clean (smells like disinfectant soap, as she just came from the hospital). I note that she, a doctor herself, went [758] to the hospital. When I went to the hospital this morning, great crowds were waiting. They have all taken to it, but there is no hope of proper care, as there are so many patients and so few doctors.

There has been a small increase in the sale
● 438 of merchandise in order to get cash to buy other items. It has not been a very great [435] change. The produce sold includes coconut, coconut oil (a few bottles, self made, sell at fl. 0.50), vegetables, bananas, betel leaves, and areca nuts. All are very small items. Coconut seems to be the main thing. All of this is sold in the town of Ende, if at all.

With the money they obtain they buy oil,
[443] soap, salt, tobacco, and even a bit of meat and other food in the toko or warong. They also buy dry fish. The toko buys its supplies in Ende.

249 I asked about the cloth situation. This is 433 a poor case now as everyone is short and the distribution of cloth by the government has not been too effective. This is a remarkable case. For many years formerly the people here had discontinued planting cotton. Then, when the Japanese came, they started up again and have done so since. Each family plants a little. The yield is not so good, but it could be, the assistant says.

R

000 be, the assistant says. Some cotton fluff is 438 sold in the pasar. Thread, however, is not 283 usually bought any more. It is rare and expensive. Thus the wheels and even the hand spindles are busy everywhere.

443 In addition to the market places mentioned before, there is another market in the cycle here. It occurs on the seventh day left out in the arrangement described before (or rather, on the sixth, as there is no market on Sunday), and this is on Thursday, I think. It is at Magekoba, on the way back from Wolowaru, and in the hills above kilometer 33.

[178] The whole market business is new, starting during the last war only. Formerly they did not have a single pasar.

436 Before the Dutch came there was no money
177 except the Portuguese dinar, which was in gold
[301] of various denominations. The assistant has heard of most of these only, as all of them have long since been melted down for ornaments. He remembers that the one like a silver rupiah was worth about fl. 12.50, and the ringgit sized one was worth fl. 25.00. There were also bigger coins and others which were smaller. There were also lead Portuguese coins, with holes in them like a gobang [a two and a half sen piece]. These too have disappeared because they were melted down to mix with gold to make an alloy.

436 I note that these people stare and stare at 727 my watch and watch band, and probably this is one thing (gold) which they might steal, as it
[301] is irresistible. I note that the women still have gold decorations. Thus the assistant's wife has a pretty good bracelet. There were big troubles when the NICA came in and the people had only Japanese money. Thousands of rupiah were lost in those times. There are just about no more silver coins here. Occa-

361 [648] hills and down to the coast. This caused much malaria and misery all over Indonesia. And after many years, the Dutch let them move up higher again, having stopped the spirit of revolt. (One can find this very expression in the reports.)

Five families from Wailolong have moved into Balela, a kampong inside the town of Larantuka (note that several Leloba families have moved there too). Balela is a little uphill, and perhaps this is the reason for the movement. I also think that it may have some relations with the "behind the mountain" area. Anyway, of these five families, only one has moved back to Wailolong. They simply do not move very much.

443 ●438 [166] No one, but no one, has moved into the kampong, except for women marrying in (and the two gurus). There are no toko or shops in Wailolong. They do not even have warong here. The women come from the beach area to sell and buy a few things (e.g., to buy arak, and to sell fish). These women come from such places as Waibalun, Larantuka, etc. But there is not much trade.

484 Everyone here has seen at least some other kampong, if only a nearby one. There are some old people who have never seen Larantuka town, or at least that is what he thinks.

167 Only two people that he knows have left Wailolong to work in some other place. One of them at least went to Borneo. As yet they have not returned.

697 648 Roy said that all who have been to jail have seen Larantuka town. This is one way to see the world. There is real bitterness here about the jail business, and I hear it cropping up constantly. The Dutch really ruled here with an iron hand, especially Seegeler, they say, whose report I got from Twerda. He was the

We.

648 controleur around 1931, when the radja also was an unfit person.

167 I was surprised when he said that just about all the young men here would like to leave and see the world. But they have almost no chance. If they did have such an opportunity, there would be a great exodus here.

721 The only great fear in the old days was war-
152 fare, and this is an intermittent danger today also. Thus, Leloba was at war with Waibalun last month, and it is feared even to walk near there. He admits that there was some fear of bad spirits formerly, but this was relatively not so bad. Still, my guess is that there are few people who are brave enough to go and sleep in other places.

20 The kakang has a telephone in his office. The only telegraph here is in Larantuka. There is no postal service. Letters must be gotten at the Larantuka Post Office. There is no radio here, and hardly anyone has ever heard one.

The mandur of the kakang transmits important orders from the administration. Rumor is very important as a means of communication, but there is practically no other means here.

The few who receive or read the mission newspaper are asked about what is in the paper. Bulletins are never posted. They see them only in Larantuka town.

443 There are a few women who come here to buy
● 438 and sell some items. The small market at Okka crossroad on the beach is held once a week, on Tuesday, in the afternoon and until Wednesday. There used to be another market on the beach at Delang.

However, there is no market system here. Roy says they simply have too little surplus to sell, and nearly nothing to buy with. In Adonara, which is richer, there is a regular pasar ring system.

326 smiths (are they full time? I doubt it). There are about ten

241 177 As before, rice and corn are the staple crops. There has been practically no change except for the introduction of new kinds of bananas, peanuts, and a few vegetables, in [433] the diet. The local community is still almost one hundred per cent self sufficient. 283 They even make their own thread from their own cotton, although they may buy some thread today.

178 There has been practically no change at all since Vatter's book was written. In Wailolong they still have a tuno wudjo.

[352] Fifty years ago there were no tables or chairs, and there are only a few now. There 291 has been a little change in regard to clothing, especially in that a few men now wear 178 shirts. And a few men also have shoes; there were none before.

A few women wear European dresses; no one wore such dress formerly. They could not sew at all fifty years ago, and there is still not a single sewing machine in Wailolong.

438 A few of the women sell some vegetables and some arak. They buy small quantities of thread, salt, hairpins, soap, medicine, and tobacco. The mountain people sell some of their forest products.

443 There has been no change at all in the market system here except for the disappearance 178 of the Delang pasar. This was mostly or en- 437 tirely a barter pasar. Cash is used at the Okka pasar. Up until seven years ago the Delang pasar was still used. There are no toko or warong here.

483 Very few people have ever ridden in a car here. Roy guesses that at the very most one per cent of the population has had such an experience.

423 The kinds of property in terms of land here are the following: kampong (which is "owned"

000 that is all.

166 609 567 614 769 There are no rites for ordinary folk who just enter the kampong. In the old days, however, when new slaves came in they had to have rites in order to tell the ancestors that they were new members of the clan. This pretty well clinches the slave entering va'u matter. They just do. This is why the former slaves are members of the clans. Only those on the inside know who is who. The longer the time gets from slavery days the more it is not brought up.

563 443 793 The only Europeans here are the pastors. The traders are Chinese and Arabs and natives. The business of the occasional Chinese pedlar with his coolie is quite usual here. They stay usually for only a few hours.

The pastors tell stories to the local people about Europe, etc. The Chinese who are regular [203] pedlars have been in Manggarai for a long time, and they spread some news.

484 In these local kampongs everyone has been to another kampong. The women go outside their own kampong less often and do not go so far away as the men. Men go out to trade horses, [438] buy tobacco, etc. During the Japanese occupation they ranged far in order to buy cloth, etc. However, all of this was within Manggarai. All have been to Ruteng.

All have been outside Rahong, as they have been to Ruteng. At least fifty per cent of the local population have never seen the sea. One person has gone to Ende, and two have gone to Kupang as soldiers. One went to Makassar to [167] work. The Japanese took several to Riung to work, but most of the people have never left Manggarai. No one from here has ever left Indonesia. In all Manggarai, the assistant thinks only one person has ever left Flores. He is a pastor, I think.

We

484 166 In the Japanese time trips were made to seek cloth, etc., but now this is done to a lesser degree, and the people never leave Manggarai although there is quite a bit of movement [438] within the area. The people who do this moving are the men who buy and sell horses, tobacco, etc. If they are away for long or at some distance, there is a feast when they return. The four who have left the area have not yet returned. When they do there will be a great gathering to hear their experiences. The assistant has seen this happen in Pau. Formerly there were no relations really with even nearby places like Tjumbi, except for marriages, and if they went to war in the dalu's army, or had internal wars, (which were rare). Nowadays there are many more relations within Manggarai. [621] In the rituals the only environs mentioned are the environs of the kampong. This comprises the ritual world and the social world of yore.

484 178 492 166 [609] Today they travel more than they did before, but still they do not go very far. Formerly any outsider was fair game for robbery and murder. Thus they were afraid to go afar. There is little in the way of transportation here. Also, the kampong is a bit too far from Ruteng to make regular trips back and forth easy. However, the horses make Manggarai people greater travelers than, for example, the inhabitants of Larantuka. Every household has [422] at least one to two horses. They are a big thing here, and now I see why I got the impression at once that there is more internal movement here than in most of the Flores areas. It is the horses. The people are fine riders, and the horses, although small, are fast and [562] spirited. Women used to mount carefully and the horse on which they rode was led. Now they jump on and gallop off (still, I don't see many women riding horses).

We

326 do not know how to do it.
178 Formerly there was no gold or silver work here. Today there is some. However, it was in Todo-Pongkor for a long time. Only a few people have learned this trade recently. The [656] Dutch forbade any metal work in any kampongs because it resulted in metal theft (what fools!).
262 There have been very few changes if any in the local diet. There is a little flour, tinned milk, etc. today. However, these things exist in very small amounts. The local people eat almost entirely their own food. The staple foods here are corn and rice, of about equal importance. In most of Manggarai, corn is more important (remember that the pastor said there was more rice now, but as a result of the wet irrigated rice fields there are more mosquitoes and more malaria). Meals are [264] served three times a day. The people eat vegetables but almost no fruit. Meat is generally reserved for feasts, and this applies even for fowl. They may cut a fowl if there is a guest, but pigs and the like are reserved for feasts. There is no longer much hunting
[224] at all. There is some bird snaring. A lot of [223] dry fish from the coast is eaten. This they have to buy. There are almost no river fish. The use of milk is new. Cheese and butter are said to make people sick. However, they eat all kinds of animals if they can get them, including cats, pythons, dogs, horses, etc.

The situation regarding food is much better today than it was. There are now many gardens, whereas formerly there were few. Today they [438] must buy salt, tobacco, fish, betel ingredi-
[435] ents, and in particular, cloth. (This is dear; an ordinary sarong costs fl. 60.00 now.)
241 Irrigated rice fields and terracing tech-
178 niques came in only twenty years ago. Farming tools have been introduced. The buffalo and
